Sophiline Cheam Shapiro, former student and choreographer from Cambodia's Royal University of Fine Arts, migrated to the United States in 1991 and studied dance ethnology at the undergraduate and graduate level at UCLA. Her work Seasons of Migration (2005) reflects her experience adjusting to a new culture and identity as a Cambodian-American. In this first-time public screening of the video documentation, Sophiline guides the audience through the dance and discusses its process and meaning. The video also highlights insights of some Cambodian-Americans in Long Beach about their diasporic experience.
